The people who inspired Harmony in Harlem...

ETHEL WATERS

ETHEL WATERS • singer and actress (Beulah) Highly successful singer, actress and recording artist who started out on the vaudeville circuit. She made her recording debut in 1921 but switched over to African American owned Black Swan label. By the end of the 1930s she was a big star on Broadway and Hollywood.

“These artists took risks, seizing every opportunity. They set a standard for music and their rebellious spirit woke people up, inspiring change and hope.”

SHINGAI SHIONOWA, ASSOCIATE ARTIST

RICHARD WRIGHT • poet • writer (Chester) “I was born too far back in the woods to hear the train whistle...” Richard Wright learned how to survive in a world of white hostility, secretly satisfying his craving for books and knowledge until the time came when he could follow his dream of justice and opportunity in the north. His most successful work, Native son, sold 250,000 hardback copies in six weeks.

LANGSTON HUGHES • poet • playwright • novelist • journalist (Samuel) His poetry was bittersweet and based on the rhythms of jazz and blues. He worked as a delivery man, a messmate on ships to Africa and Europe, a busboy, and a dishwasher.

“One of the key observers of the Harlem Renaissance. A lot of our impression of the life and culture of that era comes from his writing and forms our view of the period.”

DAN SMITH, ASSOCIATE ARTIST ON LANGSTON HUGHES

IDA COX • blues artist (Sophia) Ida Cox symbolised the liberated spirit of some black American blueswomen in the 20s with her stylish outlook, lavish wardrobe, and business savvy. Cox wrote her own songs, produced stage shows and managed her own touring company, Raisin' Cain.

“Researching the story gave me a deeper insight into the music, its background and history. R'nB wouldn't exist without these people...their magic and staying power...they wanted all the world had to give them, all it had to offer.”

DIONNE MITCHELL, ASSOCIATE ARTIST

NORMA MILLER • dancer • choreographer • comedienne • TV / film actress • author (Didi) Discovered when she was just 14, Norma Miller was “the hottest dancer as a kid.. the most exciting thing you ever saw and that's the truth” JOE WILLIAMS WHO PLAYED WITH BASIE AT THE SAVOY BALLROOM. Today, Norma Miller is in her 80s and still teaches lindy hop to young people all over the world.

MADAME STEPHANIE ST CLAIR

One of the top 'numbers' bankers in Harlem. Stood up to Dutch Schultz, a bootlegger and assassin who tried to steal the numbers racket from the Harlem underworld.. In 1935 as Dutch Schultz lay dying in a hospital, she sent a telegram to his bedside: 'As ye sow, so shall ye reap.'

“If we were to offer a symbol of what Harlem has come to mean in the short span of twenty years it would be another statue of liberty on the landward side of New York”

ALAIN LOCKE, LEADER & CHIEF INTERPRETER

OF THE HARLEM RENAISSANCE

“Everything is driven by the blues. A lot of emotion and a lot of stories. I found the root to the music, and it's even deeper than the blues...It has been a major inspiration.”

ABDUL SHYLLON, ASSOCIATE ARTIST

ZORA NEALE HURSTON • writer • folklorist (Sissi) Daughter of a preacher-carpenter and seamstress. Hurston's writings were an important source of black myth and legend. The bawdiness of her tales helped to remind the Black intelligentsia of the richness in their cultural heritage.

EUBIE BLAKE & NOBEL SISSLE • musicians • songwriters (Piff & Tyler) Eubie Blake played the organ at six years old and got his first job playing in a brothel at 15. Noble Sissle joined a male quartet on the vaudeville circuit at 17. They launched a famous songwriting partnership which changed the course of Black American musical theatre.

BOOTLEG Alcohol made in an illegal still.

THE DEPRESSION In 1929 the New York Stock Market crashed, signalling the beginning of The Great Depression, a period of unemployment, poverty and hardship.

HARLEM A suburb of Manhattan in New York City.

HARLEM RENAISSANCE From the French word meaning rebirth. Coined by writer Alain Locke to describe a new wave of creativity among black artists living primarily in Harlem.

LINDY HOP A craze that started in Harlem's black community in the 1920s and has its roots in African rhythms and in dances of the time like the Charleston and Black Bottom. Lindy became synonymous worldwide with the Big Band sounds of the Savoy Ballroom

PLAYING THE NUMBERS An illegal lottery which made the bankers rich. In any given week during the 1920s, nearly $5 million dollars in pennies and nickels moved through the streets and back alleyways of Harlem.

PROHIBITION In 1919, the USA passed a law making the sale of liquor, beer and wine illegal throughout the country. Repealed in 1933.

SPEAKEASIES Illegal bars that opened during Prohibition. The name comes from the need to whisper or 'speak easy' when crossing their thresholds.

“Go with me to the darkness where I go. Night coming tenderly Across the Harlem rooftops.”

LANGSTON HUGHES: HARLEM EXTRACTS

LOUIS ARMSTRONG aka 'Satchmo' • jazz musician “Louis was the big bang in music...the explosion that started everything...He affected all singing, all dancing, all orchestration. And changed the whole world of phrasing.” RUBY persistently practise the Lindy Hop all over Harlem... With its pattern children make fantasy on the pavement. When a new piece is put in the nickelodeon of a bar and it tilts to the Lindy Hop, the kids come together on the pavement to dance.”

BRAFF

“Groups of children

HARLEM: NEGRO METROPOLIS,

It's a pleasure to be performing Harmony in Harlem at Goldsmiths' theatre as part of the Arts and the Learning City Initiative.

Harmony in Harlem has been created, over 12 months, with the extensive collaboration of Shingai Shoniwa and Dan Smith, and the creative contribution of Dionne Mitchell, Abdul Shyllon and Jennifer Minnell – young Associate Artists at Second Wave.

During three residentials, we explored story line, characters, music and dance, created original music and songs, and developed the dance story and choreography. Many other young people were also involved in these residentials and in a series of subsequent music, drama and dance workshops. All have contributed to the shape, style and content of this original piece of musical theatre.

This creative process began with the idea of exploring how African American artists shaped an era. 'The Harlem Renaissance' of the '20s and '30s is mainly associated with the visual arts and literature by Black artists, novelists and poets.

Harmony in Harlem celebrates this and the work of the great blues and jazz artists of the period.

In devising this work of musical theatre, we were inspired by the lives of these artists and their stories are at the heart of the play. We were impressed by the depth of knowledge and dedication they demonstrated in realising jazz as a new musical art form. We were also struck by these artists' humour, resourcefulness and generosity of spirit in supporting younger artists.

Set in 1932, Harmony in Harlem coincides with the end of Prohibition and early years of the 1930s Depression. At this moment, Harlem had already become the first modern creative city and jazz music was set to redefine popular American culture forever.

young artists in a changing world

An innovative collaboration between two local centres of learning Second Wave and Goldsmiths College, University of London — part of an Arts and the Learning City initiative aimed at widening participation. This unique partnership aims to celebrate the potential of young artists — to value their achievements and recognise the real impact of the arts on the local community and beyond.

young artists in a changing world offers young people an opportunity to explore the music, dance and culture of Harlem in the 1920s and 1930s and the relevance of blues and jazz to subsequent music in America and worldwide. It aims to broaden and deepen their understanding of this major phase of musical and cultural breakthrough. Young people are involved as creators of their own original material and encouraged to develop their own musical styles and to learn from earlier jazz and blues influences.

ARTS & THE LEARNING CITY aims to build an inclusive arts and learning environment in London, for London, that genuinely encourages the highest levels of educational attainment for London's diverse communities. It aims through its collective creativity to ensure that the arts in all their diverse forms provide the fuel and energy to raise attainment, contribute to community regeneration, and provide creative engagement with London's social, cultural and economic life.

GOLDSMITHS COLLEGE is a specialist college of the University of London with an international reputation for the study and practice of creative, cognitive, cultural and social processes. Goldsmiths sees education as a life-long learning process. Within Goldsmiths PACE (Professional & Community Education) offers an extensive programme of evening and part-time courses which can be the first step to a diploma or degree.

SECOND WAVE CENTRE FOR YOUTH ARTS has for 20 years been delivering high quality, creative programmes involving young people aged 13–24 who are under-represented in higher education, the arts and cultural industries. Second Wave values creativity as a way of learning and fosters self expression and self understanding as a way of empowering young people.

"This is an excellent initiative, greatly to be welcomed. The partnership between Goldsmiths and Second Wave develops the idea of a new kind of university."
